

2.7 Point Reyes

The Point Reyes National Seashore (www.nps.gov/pore/index.htm) was the second coastal monitoring site (Figure 15). The meteorology tower was located at the so-called “MCI site” which has been used as a point for communication reception and transmission. The only obstruction was a small building southeast of the tower (Figure 16). Unlike the Piedras Blancas site, the tower at Point Reyes was further away from the shoreline (~ 1 km).
